VIII. TEACHING

The Institute of Economic Growth (IEG), where I was based till 2012, is an autonomous research institute at Delhi University with no compulsory teaching, except those appointed to teach the Indian Economic Service (IES) probationary officers on a one year (now 4 month) programme. Have, however, pro-actively sought to teach there and internationally, students doing MA, JD (law), M.Phil and Ph.Ds, college lecturers, government officials involved in policy and planning, as below:

- University of Manchester, 2012-, MA courses (co-taught with Manchester colleagues):
Courses (co-taught): Development Research Methods, Conservation and Development, Perspectives on Development, Understanding Institutions, Political Economy of Development, Politics and Development, Gender and Development, Issues in Environmental Policies.
- New York University School of Law (Fall term, 2008), taught JD, LLM, advanced seminar.
Course (sole teacher): Property and Inequality: Development and Legal Change in South Asia

- Univ. of Minnesota, St. Paul (May term 2004): MA, students esp. from Humphrey School of Public Affairs. Course (sole teacher): Development, Inequality and Environmental Change
- Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor (Fall term, 2003). Taught graduates and doctoral students. Course (sole teacher): Environment and Gender Perspectives on Development
- Harvard University (Fall term 1991-92). Taught senior undergraduates/ graduates. Course (sole teacher): Gender Perspectives in Third World Development.
- Institute of Economic Growth (IEG), 1982 onwards from time to time, co-taught with IEG faculty. Courses for IES officers (with MA degree in Economics/Statistics/Commerce and successful in IES competitive exam): Rural Development, Environment and Development, Poverty and Development. Course for college lecturers: Environmental Economics

Also co-supervised doctoral students from the Institute of Social Studies (The Hague), and from Harvard, MIT, Berkeley, Indiana, City University (New York), and Seattle (as the local supervisor for the 2 years or more spent by the student for fieldwork in India). IEG does not give doctoral degrees directly.
